Overview of Available Tutoring Services

Question: Does my child need tutoring?

If your child shows any of the following, tutoring might be helpful:

- Poor, declining or failing grades
- Child/youth has lost motivation
- Child/youth says things like “I don’t get it” or “I’m too stupid”
- Child/youth complains of stomachaches or not feeling well before going to school
- Comments on report cards that say things like “student not reaching his/her full potential”
- Homework takes too long, or the child/youth can’t seem to complete the assignment in a reasonable amount of time
- Child/youth lies about having homework, or tries to hide it
- You notice behavioral issues around homework time
- You have to fight with the child/youth to get their homework done.

Question: How can I get tutoring for my child?

Step 1. Contact your school district to find out about free tutoring provided by the school

This guide lists OSPI-approved resources that are available in schools around the state. They are listed by Children’s Administration regions. School districts get some funds based on the number of students in the Class of 2008 that failed to meet standard on the Washington Assessment of Student Learning (WASL). School districts allow different amounts of money based on need. Social workers and caregivers should check with their local school district offices to get more information on the free tutoring services which may be provided through this program. School district contact information is available on the OSPI website: <http://www.k12.wa.us/>

Step 2. Ask about your school’s Supplemental Educational Services (SES)

Schools that do not make progress each year are required by the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 to provide Supplemental Education Services (SES) to students. Students may access SES through the OSPI approved provider list.

Supplemental Education Services (SES) is tutoring or other academic enrichment activities beyond the regular school day. Services must be high quality, research-based, and designed to improve the students’ academic achievement. SES providers must be approved by OSPI. Students who are eligible to receive SES are those in low income homes and are enrolled in schools that have not made progress according to federal laws.

To find out if your child’s school is required to provide SES tutoring, follow the steps below:

1. Go to OSPI home page <http://www.k12.wa.us/>
2. Click on “school report card” (right-hand side of page)
3. Click on “AYP”
4. Next to AYP, enter the district you want in the first drop-down box and choose “district list” from the second drop-down box. Enter.
5. If the school is both Title 1 funded and in “improvement step 2, 3 or 4”, the school must provide tutoring.

You may also check with your local school district office to see if your child's school has not made Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) and must provide supplemental educational services. For more information, please refer to <http://www.k12.wa.us/TitleI/>

Step 3. Ask about your school's program for students not passing the 10th grade WASL called, "Promoting Academic Success" (PAS) Program

Promoting Academic Success (PAS) program is available to help students who did not pass the reading, writing, or mathematics WASL in 10th grade. School districts may offer assistance with summer school, Saturday classes, before or after school classes, skills seminars, test preparation seminars, and in-school or out-of-school tutoring. Ask your local school counselor if tutoring through the PAS program is available in your child's school. For more information about the PAS program, go to <http://www.k12.wa.us/SAFS/pas.asp>.

Question: What do I do if my child's school doesn't provide tutoring?

The Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction expects to add tutors to the list every year. If your child's school does not provide tutoring, check with your social worker or Children's Administration contracts manager to see if there are regional tutoring resources available.

Question: What do I do if my child needs help in school for things beyond tutoring?

If your child is facing challenges in school beyond tutoring, he or she may be eligible for the Education Advocacy Program. The Education Advocacy Program is a partnership between DSHS and Treehouse, a non-profit educational advocacy organization.. Education Advocacy Coordinators (EAC) can directly intervene and negotiate about school issues. For more information about the Education Advocacy Program, talk with your child's social worker.

The following information about tutoring providers is basic service and contact information.* Caregivers and social workers are encouraged to interview tutoring providers to help make a decision about which resource is the best fit for your child. Some questions to consider are:

- Does this provider meet the educational needs of my child?
- Is transportation going to be an issue?
- Are the services at a convenient time or location for my family?
- How many students does the provider work with at one time?
